I. Introduction

This course examines major issues and careers in the field of international affairs. Organized and coordinated by faculty members in The Sam Nunn School of International Affairs, the class involves guest speakers from business and industry, government, the not-for-profit sector, and academia. The course is designed to provide students with an understanding of issues and careers in the field and the knowledge and skill sets required to pursue these opportunities. It is required for International Affairs majors, but open to all Georgia Tech students interested in learning about opportunities in the field.

II. Course Objectives

This course will enable students to:

- Understand major issues in international relations and their impact on public policy, business, and the not-for-profit sectors;
- Acquire information about major, minor, certificate, and overseas and internship/ co-op programs offered through The Sam Nunn School of International Affairs;
- Determine their individual skills and abilities and their career interests and goals;
- Understand the variety of occupations in the field of international affairs through classroom presentations, readings, and guest speakers;
- Develop strategies to plan an effective job search, including use of campus resources and the Internet;

- Position themselves for future employment in the international arena and in jobs that value a background in international affairs.

III. Required Readings

The following text is available for purchase in the Engineer's Bookstore:

Maria Pinto Carland and Lisa A. Gihring, eds., Careers in International Affairs. 8th edition. Washington, DC: Georgetown University Press, 2008.

IV. Graded Assignments and Policies

Attendance and class participation is mandatory and will be monitored. Assessment of assigned reading for each class will be conducted by 2-3 multiple-choice questions administered via Turning Point clicker either at the beginning or end of class.

Fifty percent (50%) of the final grade in the class will be based on attendance, taken by the clicker, answers to reading questions given via clicker and class participation. As a courtesy to our guest speakers, students are required to arrive promptly, remain for the entire class period, and be prepared with questions and comments. Some speakers may choose to survey your views via clicker in the course of the class discussion, so please be sure to participate.

Students will be required to complete a Career Assessment and Strategic Plan, a formal resume and must conduct an informational interview with an off campus contact. A one-page Preliminary Career Assessment and Strategic Plan as well as a rough draft of a resume (10% of the final grade) are due in class on October 10, 2012. The final Career Assessment and Strategic Plan, formal resume, and one-page write-up of your informational interview are worth 40% of the final grade, and are due in class on December 5, 2012.

Students must complete the requirements of the course and attend regularly in order to receive a grade of "S," with a class average of 70% or better.

V. Course Outline and Readings

NOTE: The following is a tentative outline for the course. Because the class involves guest speakers, the order of topics and readings may have to be changed if there is a scheduling conflict. Changes to topics and readings will be announced on T-Square. In addition, announcements concerning changes will be made in class. Students are responsible for monitoring the course schedule and preparing for class accordingly. Additional readings may be added throughout the semester.
